New St. Louis Fair Plans Bigger and More Luring With Every Mail

To describe the mail arriving at the New St. Louis Fair headquarters daily would be like describing a crazy quilt. From every quarter of the country comes a diversified line of correspondence that admits of no classification. The topics run from minerals to babies, from garden trowels to gang plows, from monkeys to horses and elephants, aeroplanes, automobiles, fruits, vegetables, chickens, ducks, fat cattle and unheard of inventions.

While the entries two weeks ago were big enough and numerous enough to comprise a fair of overwhelming size and attractiveness they have increased about fifty per cent since then and continue to grow. The show is too big now to require special stories of any particular line of events. It is only necessary to say that no matter what one might be interested in he will find an exhibition to satisfy his heart's desire. St. Louis will put on gala clothes and take a half holiday Big Thursday. The people are buying up all the tickets to be had at 50 cents, knowing the tax at the gate will be $1. The advance sale of tickets at 50 cents closes September 10.

Don't spend hours each week blacking your stove. Ten cents' worth of stove enamel, which can be applied in a few minutes, will last six months, and all it needs is a daily wiping off with a damp cloth. Besides it looks much better than blacking.
